Select Committee Statement on the Seventh Report of the Justice Committee, Ending the cycle of reoffending – part one: rehabilitation in prisons, HC 469 (Andy Slaughter)

Backbench BusinessInternational Men's Day*Josh Newbury

That this House has considered International Men's Day, the issues affecting and contributions made by men and boys, and what it means to be a man in Britain today.

Injury in service awardTom Morrison

That this House acknowledges the extreme risks faced by police officers, firefighters, paramedics and other emergency service personnel in the line of duty; further acknowledges that many suffer catastrophic, career-ending injuries while protecting the public; regrets that these sacrifices are too often met with inadequate formal recognition; notes that existing honours are limited in scope and rarely conferred in such circumstances; believes this failure to properly acknowledge those who have sustained life-altering injuries in public service is a serious oversight; welcomes the growing cross-party consensus that urgent action is needed; and calls on the Cabinet Office to rectify this injustice by establishing a dedicated Injury in Service Award to formally recognise and honour the extraordinary sacrifice of emergency service workers injured in the line of duty.
